Ship Subsidy Bill Passed.
Last week the senate passed the ship subsidy bill. For a number of years past an effort has been made to have a bill of this sort passed, but either a majority of the senators were too honest or too ignorant to pass it. If the bill is a good thing, they were too ignorant, if it was not a good thing, they were too honest.

Graphite Co. to Start Up.
Stevens Point, Wis.—The mill of the Pioneer Graphite Co., located near Junction City, expect to start up as soon as the weather becomes favorable, after being shut down for the past three months or more. In the meantime the stock of graphite and graphite ore has been put into cans, barrels, etc., preparatory for the opening of the coming season's trade. The stock turned out by this company has given excellent satisfaction and their reputation has gone abroad. The company also stands well financially, all bills and contracts being promptly met, and they hope to do a much larger business next season than ever before. The annual meeting, held a few days ago, officers and directors were elected as follows:

President—J. R. McDonald.
Vice Pres.—Geo. T. Winkfield.
Secretary—P. E. Tugwell.
Treas.—Robt. K. McDonald.
Directors—J. R. McDonald, P. E. Tugwell, J. T. Smith, J. R. Whitaker, H. K. McDonald.

Death of Albert Hamm.
Albert Hamm, one of the old residents of this section, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. Adam Swartz, at Waukesha, on Saturday at the age of 81 years. Mr. Hamm had made his home in Rudolph for the past 22 years, but had gone to Waukesha a few months ago to visit with his sister. He was not sick at all, but on the morning of his death got up feeling about as usual, and soon after he was taken violently ill and died within fifteen minutes.

Resolutions of Respect.
The W. O. W. Oak camp No. 10, at their last meeting, passed the following resolutions of condolence:

Resolved, that we sincerely condole with the family and affliction, in their hour of trial and affliction.

Resolved, that this heartfelt testimony of our sympathy and sorrow be extended to the family of our departed friend.

Was a Bigamist.
George W. Morrison of Marshfield was arrested on Friday last by a Chicago detective charged with bigamy. The detective had extradition papers and the man was taken to Chicago. Morrison, it is said, has a wife and child at Marshfield, and a wife and step daughter in Chicago. Morrison married the Chicago woman, who was blind and induced her to dispose of her property valued at $300 for $75 and taking the money skipped to Marshfield.

Stevens Point Journal.—The Wisconsin Central passenger depot at Stevens Point was broken into Thursday night by three men who proceeded to ransack the till in the agent's office, where they secured something over $12. Mr. Silverside, the agent, had stepped out to run over to Main street for a few minutes and on his return to the depot found the door locked, but heard voices inside. He demanded admittance and was refused but after some parleying the door was opened and as he went in the three men who were inside rushed out. He was unable to identify them. On closer examination he found the till had been pried open and the money removed.

An attempt is being made to organize a party to go to Stevens Point tomorrow evening to attend a dance and party given by the Masonic fraternity of that city. If a sufficient number is obtained a special train will be run over, leaving here at eight o'clock and returning after the party. The indications are that there will be enough to get the train.

Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Conway have been undergoing quite a siege of sickness at their home. The three children were first afflicted with whooping cough, and before they had recovered from this, Helen was taken with pneumonia and James, the baby, with tonsillitis. At this writing they have both made considerable progress toward good health, and it is not anticipated that there will be any further trouble.

Dan McKercher, who is on the road
for the Grand Rapids Milling Co., spent Sunday in this city with his wife. Mr. and Mrs. McKercher expect to leave the latter part of the week for Wausau, where they will make their home for a time at least.
At that point Mr. McKercher will be able to be home more than while living here.

Miss Phyllis Faucett has resigned her position as night operator with the Wood County Telephone Co., a place that she has held for a number of years, and expects to leave the employ of the company the first of March.

Earle Pease, cashier of the First National Bank, was in Milwaukee Wednesday attending a meeting of the executive council of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, of which he is a member. Mrs. Pease accompanied him.

Mr. and Mrs. A. U. Marvin of Nekoosa, were in the city Friday evening to attend the Elks dance.
They left next morning for Milwaukee where they expected to spend a couple of weeks visiting with friends and taking in the sights.

Peter McAmley, supervisor of assessments of Wood county, left on Monday for Madison, where there was a meeting of the different supervisors of the state with the tax commission. These meetings are held every year, to which all of the supervisors of assessment are called for the purpose of getting instruction and comparing notes concerning their business.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sampson returned on Monday evening from their wedding tour, and they were met at the depot by a large and enthusiastic bunch of friends, who had gone to the train on purpose to meet them
and give them a royal welcome.
They were given a ride about town to the accompaniment of music such as is seldom heard in this locality, and the boys now feel that they have done their duty in a thorough and immense manner.

Right Rev. Bishop J. J. Fox of the Green Bay diocese will award a $200 scholarship next June, to be contested for by boys of the Green Bay diocese holding certificates of graduation from any parochial school in the diocese. The scholarship will include board and tuition for one year at St. Norbert's college of De-pere. The contest will be in charge of Rev. F. X. Steinbrocker of South Kankakee, Rev. W. J. Fitzmaurice of Appleton and Rev. J. Kastor of New London.

Spring arrived in this section bright and early Monday morning, and since then the streets in the city have run rivers of water and mud. There is probably nothing more disagreeable
in northern Wisconsin than a breaking up of winter before its time, such as we have been having during the past few days, and everybody would much rather see it remain cold enough to keep the snow on the ground and the ground frozen until the middle of March or even the first of April,
when there is no danger of such sudden changes.

Stevens Point has had the premoni-tory symptoms of a new factory in their town, but as usual in such cases,
it has not materialized into anything.
A Mr. Unstom went there from Minneapolis and represented that he had a factory that he wanted to move
there, but wanted a bonus of $50,000.
A committee of business men from Stevens Point went to Minneapolis to investigate the matter and found that the factory was only a small affair, representing an outlay of from $10,000 to $25,000. It is needless to say that the $50,000 was not forthcoming.

There are several attractions in Milwaukee this week, and the consequence is that a number of our citizens are going to spend at least a part of the week there. The Eastern Star holds a convention there, besides which Sarah Bernhardt and Olga Nethersole are both there. Among those who have either gone down or intend to go Mr. and Mrs. Earl Pease, Mrs. W. A. Brazeau, Mrs. A. L.
Ridgman, Mrs. G. R. Gardner and daughter Mabel, Mrs. H. L. Bartholomew, Mrs. W. F. Kellogg and Mrs.
O. T. Houghton.

George Krieger received a letter from Mrs. J. Brossit one day recently in which that gentleman states that he is now settled at Salt Lake City, where he is engaged in manufacturing his drill sharpeners. He states that he turned out 22 of his machines
the first year, and as they sell at $100
each, this means that he has received $22,000 for them. He states that he is very glad that the business men of Grand Rapids did not accept the offer
he made them when here, as he finds an entirely different attitude toward him out there and is able to accomplish a great deal more than he could have done here. He made a proposition to our business men at one time, but they did not accept it. Then the business men of this city offered to make a deal with him and pay him $890 a year for his services, and as he had a proposition then open to him with a position at $8 per day, he naturally turned down the magnificent offer made him here. It takes a great mind to grasp great things and it looks very much as if some of our business men had been a trifle deficient along this line. It is a clutch that a good thing was allowed to slip thru our fingers on this occasion.

How to Save FUEL

Briefly—buy a Cole's Hot Blast Coal Stove

It cuts the fuel bill in two because it burns the gas arising from burning coal. This goes to the chimney in other stoves. Cole's Hot Blast really makes $3.00 soft coal work like $1.50 hard coal. Come in and see that smokeless fuel stove. Turn away with dust, dirt and smoke in the house.

OUR CUTLERY has a good reputation in the neighborhood because while our prices are cheap, the goods are not.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the suffering of Chicago doctor in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 people died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year.

During the same year, a passing notice, every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have been saved by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Two weeks cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. Wilcox, Logan, New York. Sold by John E. Daly, druggist.

AMONG CRANBERRY MEN.

EDITED BY W. H. FITCH.

(All communications and special exchanges relating to this department should be sent to Chamberlain, Wood County, Wis.)

Bulletin No. 86.

Avoiding Cranberry Depression.
The phenomenal high range of prices at which cranberries have sold this winter may stimulate planters to greater activity in getting out new crops next season. Some reports have emanated from Cape Cod and Jersey to the effect that liberal extensions in old bogs and the building of many new ones is planned. While it must be borne in mind that much of this is likely exaggerated, there is significance in the persistency of such reports.

This journal is in receipt of expressions from some lending growers and heavy buyers and dealers in cranberries all touching upon the question of average extension. There is a disposition everywhere to caution producers against undue efforts along this line. No doubt recent prices look exceedingly flattering, and could their maintenance be assured in coming seasons, there would be for a time, at least, universal fortunes in cranberries. However, it is seldom that general conditions so favor high prices as they have done in the past two or three months.

Writing from the Cape under recent date, A. D. Makonnen, the country's biggest cranberry grower, says: "The stimulating effect of the season's high prices on production in this and other cranberry sections will prove detrimental to many growers, and to novices who contemplate engaging in the industry in the near future. It may be well for all such to bear in mind the experiences of 1904 and other years, when with normal crops the market have scarcely been able to take care of the offerings at prices not net the growers a profit."

Pres. G. R. Briggs of the Cape Cod Cranberry Growers' association has issued a circular amount of new average to be put out to bogs this year. Growers have fully realized the present market is naturally exceptional, and with a large crop very low prices are probable. Bogs planted during the past few years but fair to some income on crops, so that low prices may prove almost inevitable. These facts should go to discourage extensive additions in the way of new bogs.

A big western buyer who handled a substantial portion of the 1905 cranberry crop says: "The average now under cranberries, counting new bogs, is sufficiently large to produce with normal yields enough cranberries to supply demands. Still it must be remembered that consumption of cranberries is on the increase, and new markets are being developed, and those who have the industry at heart are constantly seeking to enlarge consumption. We fear the unusual conditions prevailing this winter may result in a heavy increase in the average, and in the future production may prove so large that we may not believe in climbing hills till we get to them, yet a word to the wise is sufficient."—New England Farmer, Feb. 17, 1906.

Cranberry growers Alarmed.

Hazzards Bay, Feb. 2, 1906.
There has been a little rain on the Cape this winter that cranberry growers are alarmed. If the water in ponds continues to fall, the growers say the water will flow from the bogs to the ponds, and leave the vines waterlogged. It is feared that there will not be a sufficient amount of water from the ponds to cover the bogs before the water in the ponds reaches below the level of the bogs. This is a condition all thru this section, and is the worst in years, although some residents say that once in every seven years, the water in all the ponds on Cape Cod goes very low, regardless of the rainfall, and that this year the ponds are due to reach a very low level.—Fruit Trade Journal.

Cranberries at Chamberland.

The marshes at Chamberland, Wis., are particularly suited to the cultivation of cranberries. The Waterman marsh, northwest of that city, is becoming one of the best of the state, and promises rich returns to the owners. The marsh was cleared a short time ago, the first crop was gathered last season, and a good yield was produced. Adjoining the Waterman marsh is found the Chamberland Cranberry company's marsh, comprising eighty acres of marsh, excellently adapted to the cultivation of cranberries.—Farmers Sentinel.

Government Work.

Prof. Cox, of Chicago, the head of the Government Weather Bureau there, called on Mr. King at the Appleton cranberry marsh Wednesday. He is making visits to the bureau's substations, one of which is located at the Appleton marsh.—Warrens (Wis.) Index, Sept. 22.

New Company.

Certificates of incorporation have been issued to the Churchill Cranberry Co., which operates a large bog in East Carver. The company is composed of Frank N. Churchill of Bridgewater and John B. Emery, of Boston and is capitalized at $25,000.

Washington's Birthday Celebration.

Madison, Wisconsin, Feb. 14.—The faculty and students of the University of Wisconsin are planning to observe Washington's birthday with an elaborate program Thursday, Feb. 22. At 11 o'clock in the morning the faculty will march in procession to the gymnasium, where the celebration is to take place. The university orchestra is to give three selections, beside "America," which will be sung by the audience. The Rev. E. E. Bwing, pastor of Grace Episcopal church, will offer the invocation, and the chief address will be given by the Rt. Rev. Archbishop S. G. Mosser. The library will be closed from 11 to 1 o'clock, that all may have opportunity to hear the address.

Plans were made to have drill and parade by the battalion, but inclement weather has made that part of the program impossible. Special seats will be reserved for the members of the Wisconsin State Library association at Madison then, as well as for the university faculty; similar provision may be made for other organizations. Innovations in the way of student marshals are being planned.

In the evening a banquet will be given in the gymnasium, that the professors and instructors may become better acquainted.

Consumers League Convention.

The annual convention of the Wisconsin Consumers' League will open tomorrow afternoon in south hall at the state university, and continue in session through Friday. The executive board will meet in the office of the university home economics department Thursday afternoon, and afterward a reception will be given the delegates and visitors at the home of President and Mrs. C. R. Van Hise of the university. At night Professor C. R. Henderson, University of Chicago, will speak on "Working men Insurance and the Consumers' Duty," and Professor T. S. Adams, of the department of political economy of the University of Wisconsin, will speak on "Some New Phases of the Labor Problem."

Friday the Rev. E. G. Updyke will open the annual business session with an invocation, which will be followed by officers' reports, election of officers and of delegates to the national convention at Boston March 15, and two addresses, one by the state president, Mrs. E. C. Gooden of Oshkosh and one by E. V. Frost, Milwaukee, chairman of the Wisconsin Child Labor committee.

Keep Boys on Farms.

There is a whole lot of complaint about boys leaving the farm, and columns of advice have been written proposing ways to stop the wholesale desertion in favor of city life. About the most sensible thing in this line comes from the Wisconsin Farmer, and with it is coupled an excellent suggestion for general stock improvement. It is urged that the ownership of a few head of stock by the boy and no interference with his disposal of the proceeds therefrom would generally lead to contentment on his part and make him satisfied with farm life.

In this connection the matter of improving the quality of the stock on the farm comes up. It is proposed that the boy be given a pure bred boister, sheep or hog and be encouraged to build up for himself a herd or flock of thoroughbreds. Pure bred stock has a good influence upon the boy aside from its value. Did you ever see a boy swell up almost to bursting point with pride over a good, fat calf, a nice colt, a fine lamb, or even a nice litter of pigs? As soon as that feeling is detected in a boy by his father, from that time forward should that boy be encouraged in his love for something good.

We have no hesitation in saying things reasonable to call the interest of the young people. This will do more than all theories that have yet been advanced to hold them to the farm. As the years go by their knowledge of the business will increase, as well as their love for it, so that when they reach maturity they are really skilled in a profession. On the other hand, let a boy grow up among scrub or grade animals and when he reaches maturity there is too often the feeling that he is no better prepared to succeed in agriculture than along other lines, with the result that he turns his back upon the farm.

Clipping New Grass Seedling.

Clipping the new seedling early in the fall and allowing the surface soil to get dry under the surface soil to conserve moisture by covering the soil and preventing direct exposure to the hot sun during both the fall and early spring. It is very essential in the fall that the soil be well saturated with moisture before freezing, so the plants will be well supplied with water and will be able to stand the winter and the covering to prevent evaporation, an ideal condition is provided for the dormant plant, advises American Agriculturist.

When Cheese Cracks.

If a cheese cracks, put well with butter and eat from the side to the center every day at least. It does not often crack unless it is left unturned too long and one side dries too rapidly.

The Apple Crop.

Moderate, if not small, appears to be the general conclusion for the apple crop from the very uneven outlook reported in the various apple sections of the country.

FARM GARDEN

OVERLAYS IN HOGPENS.

Place Comfortably Bedded Down in Winter on Concrete Floors.

By ROBERT S. SHAW, Michigan expert.

At the present time there is no floor in use in piggeries more desirable or inexpensive, considering durability, than one properly constructed of concrete, nor can as good sanitary conditions be maintained by the use of any other. And yet, notwithstanding these good qualities, cement floors are strongly objected to, and justly so, too, on the ground that pigs become crippled if required to stand in beds on them during the winter season. Even though an abundance of bedding is used on cement floors, bad results seem to follow just the same. There are few worse places for a broad sow to farrow than on a cement floor. She gathers the small amount of bedding allowed her into a small pile, kicks it off on the bare floor, which, being slippery, prevents them from getting on their feet; the cold floor soon exhausts them, and they perish. It was with the object of overcoming these objections to the cement floors that overlays were used.

The first one shows an overlay 6 by 8 feet in one corner of a pen with the door to the opposite corner.

This plan is possessed of the advantages of providing shelter for the bed when the outer door is open, and the pigs can go in and out without crossing the bed. The second one shows nine 180 pound pigs bedded down comfortably on this overlay. This form of overlay is liked to the wall so that when the pen is cleaned out it is tipped up, bedding and all, and any dirt which may have accumulated underneath is cleaned out. When the floor is cleaned the overlay is laid down and the bedding thrown off on the floor for about a week or so. The third one shows the overlay placed in the corner of the pen that portion of the floor should be raised somewhat.

Both this overlay and another now in use in the piggeries were constructed from second-hand lumber. They are raised off the floor by inch cleats or by a series of boards, which are held together by a 4 by 4 post set up around the outer edges of the overlay to hold the bedding in place. (A 2 by 4 may be used.) These were nailed to the boards below and strengthened by triangular pieces of scantling fastened in the angle formed by the 2 by 4 and the board floor. The use of these overlays three facts have been strikingly noticeable—viz, first, pigs invariably use the overlays by preference, sleeping on the bare boards if there should be no straw on them; second, of the 300 or 400 hogs

ly objected to, and justly so, too, on the ground that pigs become crippled if required to stand in beds on them during the winter season. Even though an abundance of bedding is used on cement floors, bad results seem to follow just the same. There are few worse places for a broad sow to farrow than on a cement floor. They are raised off the floor by inch cleats or by a series of boards, which are held together by a 4 by 4 post set up around the outer edges of the overlay to hold the bedding in place. (A 2 by 4 may be used.) These were nailed to the boards below and strengthened by triangular pieces of scantling fastened in the angle formed by the 2 by 4 and the board floor. The use of these overlays three facts have been strikingly noticeable—viz, first, pigs invariably use the overlays by preference, sleeping on the bare boards if there should be no straw on them; second, of the 300 or 400 hogs

ly objected to, and justly so, too, on the ground that pigs become crippled if required to stand in beds on them during the winter season. Even though an abundance of bedding is used on cement floors, bad results seem to follow just the same. There are few worse places for a broad sow to farrow than on a cement floor. She gathers the small amount of bedding allowed her into a small pile, kicks it off on the bare floor, which, being slippery, prevents them from getting on their feet; the cold floor soon exhausts them, and they perish. It was with the object of overcoming these objections to the cement floors that overlays were used.

This plan is possessed of the advantages of providing shelter for the bed when the outer door is open, and the pigs can go in and out without crossing the bed. The second one shows nine 180 pound pigs bedded down comfortably on this overlay. This form of overlay is liked to the wall so that when the pen is cleaned out it is tipped up, bedding and all, and any dirt which may have accumulated underneath is cleaned out. When the floor is cleaned the overlay is laid down and the bedding thrown off on the floor for about a week or so. The third one shows the overlay placed in the corner of the pen that portion of the floor should be raised somewhat.

Both this overlay and another now in use in the piggeries were constructed from second-hand lumber. They are raised off the floor by inch cleats or by a series of boards, which are held together by a 4 by 4 post set up around the outer edges of the overlay to hold the bedding in place. A hundred years have passed since George Washington, the upper chamber of Mount Vernon, laid his hand upon the nearest of Washington, and killed its shrublings; but that the love and veneration with which he inspired his countrymen has known no diminution is proven every recurring anniversary.

Perhaps even more conclusive evidence is to be found in the handwriting of the man who laid the keystone, and who daily visit the life-like spot, and in the absence of merry-making which marks these throngs. They come as pilgrims to a shrine, and their reverence is so great that they pass from room to room, or standing in awed silence before the tomb which holds all that of money earned by the pupils of the St. Paul schools. They have since been put in working order and continue to turn out beautiful fabrics.

In the dwelling-house the apartment coming first in order is the banquet hall, in charge of the most elaborate manner it, this room exhibits interesting proof of the power of an awakened conscience. A dog's head, broken off by some ruthless ruffian, was afterwards anonymously turned and set in the wall of the hall, and was restored to its original position. Over this mantel a French clock, which regulated the life at Mount Vernon, still ticks, tell the kled with yellow stars. While the carpet was on its way to this country Washington was made President; and, being unable in that capacity to accept the gift, it became the property of the United States government. It was afterward purchased by Judge Yates, of Lancaster, Pa., and within the last two years has been presented to the association by his granddaughter, Mrs. Townsend Wheelan, of Philadelphia.

All the plaster is shown, the key of the Basilie, and, ascending the stairway at the foot of which it hangs, is confronted by a cabinet filled with the most interesting curios. Inscribed behind glass doors is the com-

Access from this is the garden, reached with the odor of box bushes transformed from the green, outline of Mrs. Washington's garden and the fragrance of the yellow and white sweet williams and phlox and all the rest of the fragrant, old-fashioned flowers. It was an alluring spot to little Nellie Custis, who was sometimes discovered there during the hours assigned to her by her mother. When in opposition of her adopted father she held her from her grandmother's displeasure.

Mrs. Vernon, as is generally known, was purchased in 1858 by an association of ladies, which was organized in 1857, for the purpose of purchasing thirty-seven slaves. Through these representa-

It is in the rooms which these apartments flank, however, ranged on either side of a broad hall, that one is reminded of the life of the family life at Mount Vernon.

McClure Custis' music room, in which the general's taste lies upon the harpsichord which he presented her on the occasion of her marriage, recalls one of the most delightful relations of his life—his constant association with his daughter. Here she beguiled him with the songs which he loved or played the accompaniments to his mu-

Other apartments, called by the names of the states which care for them, are the rooms in which Washington has an interest peculiar to itself; but above and beyond them all in sacred associations and hallowed memories is the room in which Washington breathed his last. The "bed apartment," as it is called, is a room 200 years ago by lying stands in the same spot today. Near it is a light table stained with the marks of medicine glasses; and at its foot the chair in which the faithful wife sat watching through all the weary hours, and upon which she lay one day over, lay her open Bible.

One must climb another flight of stairs to reach the room occupied by

Jimmie O'Hare's Long Defiance of Death While Handling Nitroglycerin
—Fatal Moment of Carelessness Bound to Arrive.

But all these years Jimmie laughed at the prospect and, laughing, would load up his wagon and rattle out into the country to shoot a wild, taking with him from one to two hundred quarts of nitroglycerin. But the little adage of the plowman tells the story of Jimmie's end. As is usually the case in such accidents, nobody knows or ever will know how it happened. There was an explosion that shook the country for miles around, and when an investigation was made there was little to be found except a witie, deep hole in the ground.

Jimmie had certain rules he observed when handling nitroglycerin. One day while discussing explosives he said:

"A man had better quit this business when he loses his nerve. It is just like handling a nettle. Take hold of it and take hold strong. A nervous or panicky fellow had better stay away from glycerin, because something will happen, and it never happens to a man who has the nerve."

Jimmie was known to nearly every oil man in New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Kansas and California—Cherryvale Correspondence Kansas City Star.

The steamer Frithyot, named after one of the old Norwegian vikings, which has been chartered to take the Walter Wellman aerial party expedition to Spitzbergen, is famed in Arctic exploration annals, having been used by Mr. Wellman in his expedition of 1893, and more recently by the Ziegler party, under command of Axel Heinen, who returned from the North last year. The "Frithyot" is a three-masted craft, and very strong and sturdy. She is fitted with a 100-horse power engine, and has a 100-ton boiler. The ship was built in 1893, and constructed, the engine being of unusual power for the size of the vessel. It has been in very high places in the ice pack, and has surmounted the frozen masses successfully. The ship at times being described as similar to the explosion of a torpedo under the keel of the vessel. In the picture the Frithyot is shown with the stars and stripes floating at the masthead and with the rigging all garbed in the Wellman expedition. Frequently from the "crow's-nest", a barrel lashed to the top of the mainmast, Mr. Wellman, glass in hand, surveyed the vast ice fields lying between him and the pole.
